Long ago, there lived a man called Kwaku Ananse.

He lived with his wife and his son. His son's name was Ntikuma.

Ananse had all the wisdom in the world. But he was selfish. He did not want to share it with anybody. He wanted to save the wisdom for himself.

Ananse planned to hide it at the top of a big, tall tree. Ananse's wife got him a large pot. Ananse put all the wisdom in the pot. He didn't tell anyone.

Then Ananse got a rope. He tied one end around the pot and tied the other around his neck. That night, he sneaked out the house.

He walked slowly into the forest.
